IRONCLAD SHOWDOWN

A "Warriors Of The Sea" Story

By Richard Kraus

*A frigate was thrust on shore
By a rival cannon's roar
And an iron ship
Held in its grip
The fate of the Civil War!*

THE HEAVY FEDERAL FRIGATE Minnesota lay trapped on a sand bank in Hampton Roads, near Norfolk, Virginia. Through the long hours of the night, her crew struggled desperately under the hoarse commands of Captain Van Blunt to pull the frigate loose, but it was useless. Not even steam tugs could budge the stranded ship. Now the husky captain stared hopelessly out into the night. His ship was doomed. When morning came—

"The Merrimac will be back," Van Blunt husked to himself, "and that will be the end of our fleet!"

It was only a few hours before that the Union fleet had met its strangest antagonist of the Civil War. Sailing from the nearby Southern-held harbor, was a hulking, heavily-armored warship, the Merrimac, which the Confederates had captured from the Federal fleet and converted into an ironclad. Though untried in battle, cumbersome and unwieldy, the Merrimac had nevertheless scored a great victory over the Federal ships. Without fear of the enemy shot, she had plunged boldly into the teeth of their cannon, loosing a scorching attack that sank the huge frigate Congress and the sloop-of-war Cumberland, almost without loss to herself.

It was in this battle that the Minnesota had gone aground. She had no choice now but to wait to dawn to come, and for the Merrimac to renew her attack.

Fist clenched, Captain Van Blunt knew well the peril his ship was in. And he knew, too; what this meant to the Union cause. Already the word must have been wired to Richmond, Washington and other nearby cities. It was a great naval victory for the South. No ordinary wooden ship could stand up against the Merrimac; it would be impossible now to maintain the Federal blockade of Southern ports.

A dark shape moved up in the night off the Minnesota's port bow. There was the faint washing sound of waves against a ship's side, and the dull clanking of an anchor chain. Van Blunt heard his lookout's anxious challenge—and the firm, reassuring reply.

"This is the Federal ship Monitor! We are anchoring here to wait for morning."

The Monitor! Van Blunt felt a tingle of hope run through him. The Monitor was the answer of the North to the Southern Merrimac; it was the ironclad fighting ship that John Ericsson and a host of assistants had been working on for the past three months in a crucial race against the shipbuilders of the South. Now it was ready, in Hampton Roads—and not a moment too soon!

But as Van Blunt stared through the gloom at the faint outline of the Monitor, his optimism left him. It was a tiny ship, only a fraction of the size of the Southern ironclad, and it resembled nothing so much as a cheese box on a little raft. Was this the long-awaited reply to the Merrimac?

The Monitor had had a rough trip down from her shipyard in New York City. The engines had stopped, pumps were useless, and the below-decks' engineers were overcome and almost asphyxiated by gas. But the young commander of the Monitor, Lieutenant John Worden, knew well the vital role that his ship was assigned in the struggle to maintain the blockade. He spared neither his men or himself, and at two-o'clock in the morning of March 9, 1862, the little vessel steamed into Hampton Roads Harbor to wait for the dawn.

If the Merrimac could be stopped, the blockade would continue. If not, the Union was in grave danger.

Hours slipped by as the volunteer seamen who manned the Monitor readied their ship for battle. The Stygian night turned to a dull gray, and then the first clear light of dawn brightened the Atlantic horizon.

Suddenly a whisper was heard on the bridge of the Monitor.

"There she is!" they muttered. "It's the Merrimac! Ain't she a mean looking one though!"

On came the Southern ironclad, apparently intent on finishing off the stranded Minnesota. Unable to move, the Federal frigate opened fire on the advancing ironclad with her stern guns. The Merrimac replied at once with a well-aimed shell. Then, as if at a signal, the Monitor appeared for the first time and headed straight for the Southern ship. They made a strange contrast, heading toward each other, with the Merrimac displacing 3,500 tons, and the Monitor only 776.

DON WINSLOW

On the Monitor Lieutenant Worden held his fire, approaching at low speed. Coming closer, he stopped his engines in order to slowly drift by his opponent. Then, as he was squarely opposite the Merrimac, the Northern commander nodded, and the two guns in the Monitor's revolving turret blasted twin shells. The explosive missiles went straight to their mark, thundering against the thick armored walls of the Merrimac. But they did not penetrate, and the returning shot of the Southern ship did no more damage to the well-protected Monitor.

As the battle continued, and the two ships maneuvered for position, firing all the time, certain advantages and disadvantages became apparent.

The Merrimac had eight guns which fired fairly rapidly, while the Monitor's two guns took seven or eight minutes to reload. But this greater fire power was offset by the greater speed of the Monitor and by the fact that her draft of ten and one-half feet, less than half of her opponent's, made her much more maneuverable.

Realizing this, Lieutenant Worden nodded at his helmsman.

"Aim for the stern of the Merrimac," he ordered crisply. "If we can disable her screw or rudder, we'll have her in trouble!"

The maneuver was a clever one, for the rudder was comparatively unprotected, unlike the rest of the ship, and a hard blow there would have made it impossible for the Southerners to steer. But, as the Monitor hurtled forward, the Merrimac managed to slip to the side, and the steel ram missed by a few feet. Furious, the Federal gunners poured a volley against the Merrimac that glanced off her armor like hailstones.

Aboard the Merrimac, the commander ordered his helmsman to turn toward the still grounded Minnesota. Since it seemed that the guns of the little Monitor could not hurt him, he could concentrate on finishing off the wooden steam frigate.

Steaming through the desperate fire of the Minnesota, the Merrimac sent a single shot from her rifled bow gun. It smashed through the ship's cabins and exploded two great charges of powder, setting the Minnesota afire. Before the Monitor could come up, the Southern gunners scored on the nearby tug Dragon—exploding her boiler.

Now the Monitor was close, her two guns blasting fire. Attempting to change position, the Merrimac momentarily went aground. As she came off the sand bank, Lieutenant Jones' jaw set.

"They tried to ram us—and failed," he said. "Now we'll try our luck...."

Putting on all power, the Southern ship headed straight for the Monitor, attempting to run her down. But Lieutenant Worden put his helm hard to starboard, and the blow merely sideswiped his ship, causing little damage. In fact, the Merrimac was more severely damaged than the ship she had hit, for the blow loosened temporary repairs made where her prow had been damaged in the previous day's action.

"Head for the shoals," ordered Worden. "We'll bring ammunition up to the turret."

"Aye, aye, sir."

As the tiny ironclad withdrew momentarily from action, the command of the Merrimac formed a new plan of attack. So far, the indiscriminate fire of the Southern ship had done little damage. They decided now to concentrate on the small pilot house of the Monitor, hoping, through relentless fire, to weaken it. And the strategy worked! A shell struck directly on the Monitor's pilot house, breaking in part of its protecting shell and lifting the iron cover of the turret.

Lieutenant Worden, who had been directing the fire from behind the steel slits of the turret, reeled backward, his face and eyes burned by the exploding powder and cut by steel fragments that had penetrated the opening. Unable to see, he gave swift orders that put the Monitor to starboard, and called for the executive order, to turn the command over to him.

When the subordinate officer, Lieutenant Greene, clambored into the pilot house, he found that the Merrimac had now turned away and was heading back toward Norfolk.

"Fire after her!" he shouted tensely.

But the Southern ironclad disregarded the last two shots that screamed after her, and continued on into her port.

THIS BATTLE was over—and barring minor casualties on either side, the first duel between heavily armored fighting vessels that the world had known ended up a tie. But the final results were much more important than the immediate outcome of this fight. In holding back the Merrimac and compelling her to retreat to port, the little Monitor had prevented her from doing any further damage to the wooden Federal fleet, and had, in fact, saved the Northern blockade.

SPECIAL
3 MONTH
SIZE
TREATMENT

While there is something new under the sun almost every day, Beauticians, Expert Hairdressers and Dermatologists are all familiar with the use of LANOLIN. In recent years, it has been believed that CHOLESTEROL is the active ingredient of LANOLIN. CHOLESTEROL is an ingredient found in all vegetables, in all animals, and in our own bodies. It is now possible for chemists to produce a synthetic CHOLESTEROL, which makes it possible to use CHOLESTEROL in this Special Hair and Scalp System. Your hair grows from the follicles located in the tissues of your scalp. The condition of your hair depends upon the normal health of your scalp. The LANOLIN Cream Shampoo which you receive with this treatment is to be used as a Shampoo to cleanse the hair and scalp of dust, dried perspiration, grime, etc.

YOU GET EVERYTHING, THE JAR OF JUELENE SYSTEM (SCALP AND HAIR LUBRICANT), THE LANOLIN CREAM SHAMPOO, THE DH-12 FORMULA containing CHOLESTEROL, PLUS THE SPECIAL LANOLIN COMPOUND, ALL A REAL BARGAIN AT $4.45 BUT IF YOU PAY IT ONLY $2.95, plus postage, FOR EVERYTHING. FOLLOW the JUELENE SYSTEM DIRECTIONS you receive with your package of THESE 4 FORMULAS, and YOU WILL BESS THE DAY YOU BEGAN and TRIED THIS PROPER WAY.

LET ME GIVE YOU A NEW HE-MAN BODY!

*Charles
Atlas*

Awarded the title of
"The World's Most Perfectly Developed Man" in an international contest.

My Secret Method Has Worked for Thousands No Matter How Skinny or Flabby They Were—Now, Why Not Let It Work For You?

HERE'S WHAT I'LL PROVE 15 MINUTES A DAY CAN DO FOR YOU

I don't care how old or young you are, or how ashamed of your present physical condition you may be. If you can simply raise your arm and flex it I can add SOLID MUSCLE to your biceps—yes, on each arm—in double-quick time! Only 15 minutes a day—right in your own home—is all the time I ask of you! And there's no cost if I fail.

I can broaden your shoulders, strengthen your back, develop your whole muscular system INSIDE and OUTSIDE! I can add inches to your chest, give you a vice-like grip, make those legs of yours lithe and powerful.

I can shoot new strength into your old backbone, exercise those inner organs, help you cram your body so full of pep, vigor and red-blooded vitality that you won't feel there's even "standing room" left for weakness and that lazy feeling! Before I get through with you I'll have your whole frame "measured" to a nice, new beautiful suit of muscles!

WHAT'S MY SECRET?

"DYNAMIC TENSION!" That's the ticket! The identical natural method that I myself developed to change my body from the scrawny skinny chested weakling I was at 17 to my present superman physique! Thousands of other fellows are becoming marvelous physical specimens—my way. I give you no gadgets or contraptions to fool with. When you have learned to develop your strength through "Dynamic Tension" you can laugh at artificial muscle-makers. You simply utilize the DOMINANT muscle-power in your own God-given body—watch it increase and multiply double-quick into real solid LIVE MUSCLE.
